Who It Is For

- Small offices with up to nine users
- Teams needing mobile printing access
- Users requiring duplex scanning
- Businesses using Wi-Fi networks
- Users prioritizing low-cost printing
- Organizations with standard paper workflows

Who It Is Not For

- Large enterprises with high-volume printing
- Users without reliable Wi-Fi access
- Those needing professional-grade scans
- Organizations requiring single-function devices
- Users prioritizing ultra-high resolution
- Small businesses needing fax capabilities

Trade Offs to Consider

- Slower color print speed than some competitors
- Limited mobile app features compared to premium models
- No built-in Ethernet for wired-only setups
- Lower resolution for color scanning
- Requires XL ink tanks for maximum yield
- No automatic document feeder for scanning

⇄ How It Compares

- Better than basic printers for all-in-one use

- Slower than high-end color printers

- More versatile than single-function devices

- Less durable than industrial-grade models

- Easier to set up than networked printers

- More expensive than entry-level all-in-ones
