Who It Is For

-  Home offices needing multi-function device
-  Small businesses with low print volume
-  Photographers requiring high-resolution scans
-  Students needing document copying
-  Remote workers requiring wireless access

Who It Is Not For

-  High-volume commercial print shops
-  Users needing large-format printing
-  Mobile-only users without Wi-Fi
-  Those requiring premium paper handling
-  Users prioritizing ultra-low cost per page

Trade Offs to Consider

-  Higher upfront cost than basic printers
-  Requires periodic ink refills
-  Limited mobile app features
-  Smaller paper size capacity
-  Slightly slower print speeds than laser
-  No automatic paper feeding

How It Compares

- Better than basic printers for multi-function
- Less capable than high-end office machines
- More expensive than single-function models
- Fewer features than laser printers
- Easier to set up than networked devices
- Slower than professional-grade printers

Choose This If...

- ✓ Need compact multi-function device
- ✓ Require wireless and Ethernet connectivity
- ✓ Print moderate volumes at home
- ✓ Value eco-friendly refillable ink
- ✓ Need high-resolution scanning

Skip This If...

- ✗ Print large volumes daily
- ✗ Need large-format printing
- ✗ Require premium paper handling
- ✗ Prioritize ultra-low cost per page
